Chestnut Group: focused on Norfolk strategy

June 18 2024: The Chestnut Group is exploring the potential acquisition of Le Strange Arms Hotel in Old Hunstanton. Discussions are still at an early stage and no agreement has yet been made.

Le Strange, in the holiday destination of Old Hunstanton, has its own private beach as well as accommodation and also includes an adjacent pub called The Mariner. It was originally built in the 1600's with the main body of the hotel completed in the 1800's.

Philip Turner, Founder of the Chestnut Group, is aware of the recent rumours surrounding the acquisition of Le Strange. He said: 'We are in discussion to add Le Strange to our growing portfolio of hospitality properties in the East of England. Le Strange and The Mariner have one of the best locations on the coast and could be fantastic additions to our business.'

Chestnut has a strong presence in the East of England. Its properties in Norfolk include The Maltings which will open later this summer. It also recently acquired The Lifeboat Inn and The Chequers, both in Thornham, near Hunstanton.
